TUFTS UNIVERSITY

Tufts University: The Fletcher School of Law & Diplomacy
ASSOCIATE/ASSISTANT PROFESSOR IN PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW
Location: Medford, MA

The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, established in 1933 as the first exclusively graduate school of international affairs in the United States, seeks to fill a faculty position in public international law. The candidate should have particular expertise and interest in international humanitarian law and international criminal law; teaching experience in at least one of these fields is desirable. In addition, the ability to teach courses in human rights, rule of law, comparative constitutional law, or related areas would be an added benefit. Specific research interests may include aspects of any of the above or related topics. Policy as well as scholarly experience is a plus; the ideal candidate will have 5-10 years of professional experience in government, inter-governmental organizations or non-governmental organizations, and/or academia. A J.D. or equivalent law degree is required. A Ph.D. degree would be an added benefit.

The successful candidate will be responsible for teaching, research, and supervising graduate student research, and will contribute to various faculty service responsibilities at The Fletcher School as well as in its intellectual community. The Fletcher School's faculty is multi-disciplinary with a focus on preparing tomorrow's leaders with a global perspective. The School undertakes research and prepares masters and doctoral students to use the latest political, business, economic, and legal thinking, among others, to generate pragmatic policies or make executive decisions that will successfully shape global events.

Review of applications will begin on November 1, 2016 and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should send a cover letter, curriculum vitae, any supporting materials, and 3 letters of reference. All application materials should be submitted online through:
